Please Help Preserve Our Heritage Sites for Yourselves and the Future by Following These Guidelines

Walls are fragile and continually deteriorating. Do not climb, sit or stand on walls. Do not pick up or move rocks.

Artifacts, where they lay, tell a story. Do not dig, remove, or pile up artifacts.

Cultural deposits, including soils, are important to scientific testing. Do not add anything, including offerings, to a site.

Fire destroys prehistoric materials. Absolutely no fires, campfires, candles, smudging or smoking at the sites.

Oils from hands can cause deterioration of the drawings. Do not touch rock art.

Graffiti is destructive and can destroy rock art, buildings and trees. Do not vandalize the sites.

Desert plants, soils and animals are fragile. Stay on trails.

Domestic animals can damage sites. Pets are not allowed at the Forest Service sites.
